BRUCEBURGE, Mo., Feb. 28, 1884.

The names of parties going west on emigrant trains are as follows:

Wm. C. Read and wife; Miss Clara B. Read; W. F. Read, wife and child; A. Brownell and three children; Dr. A. G. Lewis, wife and two children; Rev. I. Carlton, wife and seven children; Mrs. J. H. Henderson and child; H. L. Barcroft, wife and two children.

These go to various points, some to California, some to Oregon and some to Washington Territory.

One day last week Messrs. Wm. and Chris. Missman, the former of whom lives in this city, and the latter on the road between here and Jintown, went across the river to look at some land recently purchased by Mr. Wm. Missman. Mr. Chris. Missman's family was also absent from home on that day, leaving no one on the premises.

During their absence some rascal went there, procured an ax from the woodpile, burst open a door of the house, went in and helped himself to everything he could find that suited his fancy, taking among other things, all of Mr. Missman's clothes, his son's overcoat, a silver watch and two leaves of bread. The thief either knew the occupants of the house would be absent some time or was very bold, for he built a fire in the cook stove and cooked a meal, which he apparently devoured at his leisure. Wishing, it is supposed, for some receptacle in which to carry the stolen goods, he took a sack containing dried apples, emptied the apples upon the floor and appropriated the sack for the above purpose. Of course, vigilant search was made for the thief and missing articles, but so far as we could learn, without success.

Hale City.

The editor of the CRISIS, accompanied by Mr. Lewis Estep, paid a visit to the marvelous new town of Hale, Carroll Co., Tuesday. Hale was started last fall, in a cornfield in which the corn had not been gathered and, notwithstanding the severe winter, seventy-five or more houses have been built, about twenty of which are business buildings, all of which, now completed, being occupied.

Hale has a splendid location, but laying that aside, the men who have the push and vim to do the building that has been done in Hale, this, the coldest of winters, would make a thriving town anywhere.

Nearly all of the original plat of the town has been sold and the building boom may be considered just fairly started.

TERRIBLE RAILROAD ACCIDENT.

A Passenger Train on H. & St. Jo. R. R. Takes a Plunge into Chariton River.

A Number Wounded and One Boy Killed.

Allan Account of a Broken Rail.

The passenger train on the Hannibal & St. Joseph Railroad that left Quincy at 10:45, Friday night, met with a terrible accident at Chariton River, forty-seven miles east of Chillicothe. The train was running rapidly in order to make a heavy grade, when a broken rail was struck just east of the bridge, throwing from the track down a steep embankment, two Pullmans, President Perkins' special car No. 200, which was only occupied by a porter, one reclining chair car and coach. They fell in every position imaginable, and were badly smashed up. It is said there were $20,000 worth of silverware on the Perkins' special car. The smoker, which contained twenty or thirty men, women and children, went through the engine and fell on its side at the east bank of the river, in ten feet of water, but fortunately the debris prevent it sinking further than six feet, so that a man standing on a car seat could keep his head above water. The passengers escaped by climbing out of the windows, and were rescued by persons from the other cars. All got out of this car but a

FIVE-YEAR OLD BOY, WHO WAS DROWN.

He was the son of J. E. Baldwin, who with his wife, son and daughter, Wallace and Pearl, were on their way to Los Angeles, California. The father, mother and daughter were severely bruised, and they were taken to New Canaan, two miles west of the wreck, where they received medical aid.

The engine passed over safely, but the language car lying over a trestle fifty feet long and was pushed into the river by the wrecking gang. The mail car followed the grand rail of the trestle, coming to the north and pitching down a twenty-foot embankment, shaking up the postal clerks pretty badly.

The accident occurred about 10 o'clock, Saturday morning, and till daylight scarcely anything could be done for those imprisoned in the smoker. At 8 A. M. Superintendent Dunn left Hannibal on a special with Dr. J. Kearney, and at 10 o'clock arrived at the scene, where they immediately commenced cutting for the injured. The following is a list of the injured who were taken to Brookfield:

J. E. Rose, St. Louis, cut and bruised on face, head and limbs.

W. H. Howell, mail agent, slight wound.
